

cherishes you
my beloved never may be guided guard you
in this storm
let it pass as ever
just reached our dear friend, with what deep interest I have listened to all you tell us you will easily imagine.
My heart is constantly with you all, and with the world wide suffering around you. When will the plague be staid? who can reply - none - but all can enter into the fearful sufferings that must be

Dec. 30th

[1851]

constantly before your eyes.
Now I wish that you could see it right to come away from it all, and to put it up, but because you are so valuable to others, so very precious to some, that the thought of danger for you saddens my spirits and makes it very fearful. it seems too as if all Anti Slavery hope must be banished from Paris, and here so much might to be accomplished for the cause, that I would gladly give you over - but you know it best - only do be careful - and let us long times I beg of you rest without our having some tidings from you however brief - What a blessing it wd be to be able to speak or write out all that is pressing so heavily on my heart, but the uncertainty that it may reach you, and the feeling that it had better remain unsaid makes me refrain you know how entirely my thoughts, hopes, imagining are with you - You have left behind you a deep impression here, all engines are industriously after your welfare and wish you were in a home of peace and safety.

How thankful I am to have heard from you, and yet sadder than before, not all self-ly for my own great disappointment, but for the woes for which there seems to be no remedy. God bless and